Professional Bio

Amber Harris's commitment to supporting survivors and building stronger communities began during her undergraduate years at Project Safe, a domestic violence shelter in Athens, Georgia. While earning her Master of Social Work, she interned with and later joined the Atlanta Women's Foundation, contributing to programs that uplift women, girls, and families across the city.

Since joining In Safe Company in 2006, Amber has played a key role in strengthening the agency's financial sustainability, public visibility, and strategic direction. As Chief Development Officer, she leads fundraising, donor relations, and communications—securing grants, cultivating donor relationships, and producing major events like the Champions for Change Gala. She oversees all aspects of marketing and branding, including digital campaigns, social media, websites, and media outreach, and coordinates with legislators on contracts, grants, and public partnerships.

Amber also supervises development staff, interns, and volunteers, and serves on the executive leadership team. She has held board roles with Georgia Shares and the Field Education Advisory Board for Georgia State University's School of Social Work, and has been active in her local PTA.

A graduate of Leadership DeKalb, Amber co-led a focus group on poverty, presenting policy solutions to address homelessness and the need for long-term, wraparound services. She has appeared on national and local media to advocate for survivor-centered responses to domestic and sexual violence.

With two decades of nonprofit leadership experience, Amber continues to use her expertise to create lasting impact for survivors and their families.
