Professional Bio

Stephanie Lloyd joined In Safe Company in 2025 as Director of Community Engagement, bringing more than a decade of experience in nonprofit development, marketing, education, and arts programming. A dynamic leader and creative communicator, Stephanie has led community engagement and advancement efforts at Our House, The Hudgens Center for Art & Learning, Heritage Sandy Springs, and the Atlanta History Center.

In her role at ISC, Stephanie oversees volunteer engagement, public education campaigns, and agency communications. She recruits, trains, and supports a diverse corps of volunteers; manages the organization's social media presence and digital content; and coordinates public events and outreach efforts that raise awareness about domestic and sexual violence. From developing monthly newsletters to promoting legislative advocacy and facilitating community-wide campaigns like Domestic Violence Awareness Month, she ensures ISC's message is clear, consistent, and impactful across platforms.

Stephanie holds a Master's degree in Creative and Innovative Education from Georgia State University, with a concentration in Nonprofit Leadership, and a BFA in Musical Theatre from Elon University. She believes in the power of storytelling to build connection and inspire change, a belief that drives both her professional work and her personal creative practice.

Outside of her nonprofit leadership, Stephanie is a professional actor, voice talent, and visual artist. Her passion for using the arts to engage and uplift communities continues to inform her work as an advocate, educator, and changemaker in the movement to end violence.
